GEN. HARROW'S SPEECH.

VIEWS ON TAXATION—A PIECE OF WAR HISTORY.

OPPOSED TO NEGRO SUFFRAGE.

IN FAVOR OF COLONIZATION.

We gave yesterday an imperfect report of that part of Gen. Harrow's speech, of Tuesday night, before the Union Club, in which he gave his Congressional competitor, Mr. NIBLACK, such a terrible excoriation. But there are other parts of the speech which are worthy of, and will receive, the careful attention of the voters of this District.

The General, in the course of his remarks, presented a good popular answer to the Copperhead denunciation of the exemption of the Government bonds from taxation. While the Democracy did all they could to depreciate their value during the war, and break down the credit of the Government, by declaring that they were illegal and would soon be so utterly worthless that a peck full would not buy a breakfast, and refused to have anything to do with them in the time of our greatest financial need, now they are the most ready to estimate their great value, and declare that the wealth of the country should not be exempt from taxation. They insist now, that the Government should break its faith with its creditors, violate its obligations, and impose terms which the highest courts of the land have decided, and every respectable lawyer knows, it cannot do. The present war was not carried on by the Democracy, but the General recalled to us another war that was originated, carried on, and concluded by a Democratic administration. A war, too, not for the protection of the nation, but for subjugation and conquest. It had few of the high and patriotic purposes of the late war for the salvation of the Union. And yet it should be remembered that it had connected with it the same financial legislation as the late war. He referred to the Mexican war. During that war, National Bonds were issued upon the faith and credit of the Government to pay the army and other military expenses; and yet a Democratic Administration inserted the same clause of exemption from taxation. Who ever heard the demand made in that day for the taxation of the Mexican War Bonds? On the contrary, the interest was regularly paid in gold, and they were exempt from taxation, until they were redeemed by the United States Treasury. That was a Democratic war for foreign conquest. This was a war against Democratic rebels of our own land, and their allies in the North, such as HENDRICKS, VOORHEES and NIBLACK stand ready to do all they can to aid them, even if it must result in repudiation and loss of the nation's credit.

The General charged that NIBLACK and the rest of these honest Democrats were not really in earnest in their opposition to the National Bonds, but were only resorting to the miserable subterfuge of humbug the people by this appeal to their prejudices against rich men and class-legislation. When did NIBLACK or HENDRICKS, while in Congress, introduce a bill for the taxation of Bonds, or where can they show a single effort in their Congressional life, where they sought to remove the evils of which they now so loudly complain? Never. It is the meanest trickery of dishonest partisanship, advocated with the most shame-faced insincerity.

In regard to the question of negro suffrage, the speaker mentioned that by fair and legitimate construction of the second section of the proposed Amendment to the Constitution, the matter of suffrage was referred entirely to the States; and that, therefore, it was not a pertinent question with him and his competitor. If he were a candidate for the State Legislature, it would be proper for him to give his views on the question, as it might then fall within the province of State legislation. Congress had nothing to do with the question, and could not have, under the Constitutional Amendment, if adopted. He had no hesitation, however, in announcing to his fellow-citizens that he was opposed to negro suffrage.

There was a question which concerned the people more than that of negro suffrage, to which he wished to call the attention of voters, and to state candidly his views upon it. He said that this inevitable negro question had been agitating the politics of the country long enough, and he thought it ought sometime to come to an end. He proposed to go back to the days of the immortal WASHINGTON, and the patriotic CLAY, for his views upon the subject. After fully considering the question, he could see no way in which we could so effectually get rid of this source of turmoil, as by returning to the old plan of Colonization. It was the plan advocated by WASHINGTON and CLAY, and proposed by Mr. LINCOLN; and, to-day, he believed it was the most feasible way in which the question could be forever settled. He thought that now that emancipation had brought about a change in the condition of the negroes, one of the great objections, heretofore urged against colonization, the enormous cost, was in a great degree removed, and that a plan could be devised by which we could rid our white society entirely of the negroes, and gather them together somewhere under the protectorate of the United States, where they would be more happy and contented than amongst us. He had not time nor strength to-night fully to explain his views or to present the details of a plan, but he was fully assured that it was feasible and best for both races. And he believed the people of this District would agree with him in his views.

The applause which greeted the announcement of the General's views on this question showed that he had carried the large audience with him, and that his views received their cordial indorsement. The position assumed by the General, and his views upon this question, which so nearly interests the peace of society, will receive the attention, and we doubt not, the hearty approval of the people of this District.

We have only attempted to give a brief notice of the points touched upon in the General's speech, which especially related to his race with Mr. NIBLACK, and to which the people's attention will be more particularly directed. We have not space to-day to give a summary even of his searching review of the President's record, his present inconsistencies, and his base abandonment of the party which made him all that he is; nor the withering denunciation of the Rebel leaders and their Copperhead allies at the North.

We assure our friends that General HARROW is the right man for our standard bearer, and that if every voter in the District could hear the speech of Tuesday night, the ballots of October would bury WILLIAM E. NIBLACK so deep in public condemnation that he would never emerge again from political obscurity.

A Good Letter.

Mr. Harrow, Abolition candidate for Congress in this District, recently proposed a joint canvass with W. E. NIBLACK, Democratic candidate. Mr. N., as will be seen by the letter below, very properly declines confining himself to certain times and places at the threshold of the canvass, and gives good reasons for his position. If Harrow desires a joint arrangement, however, toward the close of the race, he will be cheerfully accommodated, as is indicated in Mr. N.'s letter.—Vincennes Sun, Aug. 21st.

In view of the fact that there are only about six weeks of the canvass left, and ten large counties in the District, the above is about as cool impudence as can be imagined, especially when we read again the following item:

Hon. W. E. Niblack reached home Friday evening. He is in fine health, and "eager for the fray" with any gentleman who wishes to discuss the living, political issues of the day.—Vincennes Sun, Aug. 7th.

We judge, after Mr. NIBLACK has read the report of General HARROW's speech of Tuesday night, he will make it quite late in the campaign before he finds time to make any appointments with him. It would be dangerous for him to call his partisans out to hear such plain language as the gallant General uses.

Keep It Before the People.

We have not yet succeeded in inducing the Courier to reproduce that item of intelligence, which it was so intent upon keeping before the people, respecting the increased pay voted to themselves by the last Congress. Neither has it answered that baker's dozen of questions which we propounded. Can it be that the new ex-editor sanctions the vote and action of Mr. NIBLACK in the matter?

From the report of the Copperhead Johnson meeting, Tuesday night, it appears that Sergeant WHITE completely demolished SCHUYLER COLFAX, Speaker of the United States House of Representatives. How badly Mr. COLFAX must feel, when he hears of the calamity.

What Congress Has Done.

We publish a portion of a speech delivered by Judge WILLIAM LAWRENCE, of Ohio, delivered to his constituents on his return from Washington, after the adjournment of Congress. It presents some of the leading measures of Congressional legislation, which every intelligent voter should understand. The contest before the people is between the policy of the President and the action of Congress, and in order that we comprehend fully the issues it is important that we have a clear understanding of what Congress has done. This Judge LAWRENCE presents in a concise and plain statement of facts. We have omitted his review of the action on the proposed Constitutional Amendment, as that measure has already been fully discussed in our columns.

New Albany and Evansville.

The New Albany Commercial reports the number of school children of that city at 5,117 on the enumeration of 1866, just completed. The number of school children in Evansville, as heretofore published in the JOURNAL, is 6,625. These figures would seem to indicate that Evansville has a population three-tenths greater than New Albany. All the official data go to prove that Evansville is only surpassed by Indianapolis in population, and that its business is greater than that of any other city in Indiana.

THE PREMIUM LIST.—We commence this morning the publication, on the third page, of the Premium List of the Vanderburgh Agricultural Society, and will complete it to-morrow.

WABASH COLLEGE.—We direct the attention of parents, students, and the friends of education to the advertisement of Wabash College in another column. This institution is one of the oldest and best established in the West, and is well known to many of our readers. There is probably no College in Indiana which has sent forth a more useful or able body of public men. From a personal acquaintance with many of its Faculty and students, we take pleasure in bearing testimony to its high standard of scholarship, and to its thorough moral and christian influence. The President, Dr. JOSEPH F. TUTTLE, is well known to many of our citizens. We are pleased to learn that a number of young men from this city and vicinity will pursue their studies at Wabash the coming year. Its catalogue and course of study can be seen at this office.

Extract from an Editorial in the New York Express.

Of those who presented some remarkable cures were different parties connected with the press of New York, as leading editors and proprietors. Through this, we presumed, had they become identified with the advocacy of this practice in a manner which indicated an interest that nothing else could probably induce, Messrs. Clayton, of the Commercial Advertiser; Jones, proprietor of the Daily Times; Bennett, of the Herald, and other similar persons in the press here, having been benefited by this new practice, gave it the impulse which it has had through that channel. Besides such personal "venality," there is also another which may have operated: the privilege of commanding, from time to time, some consumptive printer, who had spent all his means without effect on the old practice, to the liberality of a man who provided him with the medicine and skillful treatment, without charge, among the other patients of a large and generous clinic. When such a man returned to the subject, himself a patient no longer, surely Dr. Hunter might reasonably have some claim upon his gratitude. Indeed, it seems to us that, of all other diseases, the establishment of the curableness of Consumption should naturally command the most attention from the public press, and secure for such a man as Dr. Hunter a consideration which has by no means been fully met as yet.

For the pulmonary patient, the physician has hitherto been little more than a pall-bearer. The announcement of a modification of this condition of things, and the possibility of arresting or eradicating this melancholy malady to an extent equal to the mitigation of small-pox by the vaccine, is a matter of interest not only to the profession, but to everybody else.

It is strange enough that the simple principle of INHALATION, although discussed in the days of Hippocrates, should never have been developed to any practical result until the middle of the nineteenth century.

Inhalation, like etherization, is no new fact. The system which will be based upon it may, however, be regarded as altogether new. The process of applying the known properties of all available medical substances to a DIRECT LOCAL USE, in cases of diseases of the lungs and their appendages, must be, if followed up now, the foundation of an entirely new system of medical practice. It must, as it seems to us, if followed out, compel a subdivision of the profession as distinct as that of surgery, and the compilation of a peculiar and entirely new modification of the usual materia medica. The known principles of medical substances will, of course, be so far available; but the dose calculated for action, in connection with the contents of the stomach, cannot determine the dose for the altogether different process of the lungs.
